PREFACE

A complete plot-to-plot survey of the Province was carried out by the Agricultural Development Department of the Government of undivided Bengal in the year 1944-45. In course of that survey details were collected about blocks of lands lying waste in different parts of the Province and the reasons given by local people for such lands not being utilised. A list of all such blocks considered culturable has now been compiled and is herewith published for the information of all concerned. The measures which, according to local people, are necessary to develop these lands, where available, have been indicated against each item by code letters, explanation of the code being given at page 1 of the book.

It is to be noted that the present list shows the position of blocks of lands which were found "waste" during the survey of 1944-45. Some of these lands may have been brought under cultivation or other use since that time. Waste land, in this list, includes ordinary uncultivated lands believed to be culturable, as also lands commonly known as "Bhita", "Chhankhola", "Grazing Ground", "Jungle Lands" (not forests), etc.

Members of the public have frequently approached Government for information about waste lands which they wanted to acquire by purchase or lease for establishing agricultural or horticultural farms, dairy and poultry farms, colonies, mills, etc. It is believed that the information contained in the list, though not quite up-to-date, would be of help to such persons in their search for suitable lands.

No information was obtained about the ownership of these lands. Blocks found waste are in some cases owned by a single person and in others consist of small individual plots belonging to a large number of persons. Only a small number of these are believed to be owned by Government though such lands have not been specifically identified.

A similar list in respect of blocks of waste lands in West Bengal of size between 5 and 100 acres will shortly be published as volume II of this publication.

NIHAR CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI,

Assistant Secretary to the Government of West Bengal.
